PRIMUS for Consulting firms, explained simply

You are a firm of advisers. Companies pay you to help them through their crises. Your score is the money you earn: fees + bonuses + the value of any shares you were paid in.

How you earn

1. Round 1 · Prove yourself (21:10–22:00). Every firm writes a memo on the same case. A good memo earns a bonus and builds your name. Then, by 22:30, make Call 1: for each of the two companies you follow, guess whether its price will go up (BUY) or down (SELL) after the IPO. Each correct call earns $2,500.
2. Round 2 · Win clients (22:45–04:45). In each of the four crises:
   - companies send you offers: money, shares or both. Accept, decline or ask for more. You can take two clients per crisis;
   - write an advice memo for each client before the due time. No memo = no fee;
   - your clients rate you 1 to 5 stars. Good memos and good stars earn a bonus; poor ones cost you.
3. Round 3 · The last job (04:45–06:30). Get hired again and help your client write its solution.

Tips

- Fill in your profile early: companies choose a firm from it.
- Your Home page lists every offer to answer and every memo to write, with countdowns.
- Read each client's crisis card and plan, and give advice with numbers that fit them.
